Cancer treatment at Ochsner combines surgery, radiation

Greater hope for patients with inoperable cancer may be found in a new combination of surgery and radiation used by an Ochsner Clinic team to permit more precise and effective treatment.

Called "intra-operative radiation therapy," it consists of giving a patient a high dose of radiation during actual surgery while a tumor is exposed, instead of afterwards.

Planning for the procedure took place under the direction of the Ochsner Cancer Institute in New Orleans, La.

Four patients have received the therapy thus far, the latest being a 54-year-old man with recurrent pelvic cancer.

Termed "a new dimension in treating patients with tumors which cannot be surgically removed," Dr. John S. Bolton, Ochsner surgeon and assistant director of the cancer institute, says "it's not a panacea, but it does offer greater ability for long-term control of a localized tumor."

"In some cases, this might effect a cure when it wouldn't have been possible otherwise."

"This new way of combining surgery and radiation involves transporting the patient from the operating room to radiation therapy and then back to the operating room," according to Bolton.

"We are fortunate that, at Ochsner, the two areas are fairly close. In other medical centers where this procedure is done, among them the Mayo Clinic, Massachusetts General Hospital and National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., the patient sometimes has to be moved to another building for radiation therapy," he explains.

The procedure begins in the operating room where the surgeon determines whether or not the tumor can be removed.

"If it cannot be resected and it is confined to a local area, we temporarily close the abdomen (or chest) so that it remains sterile and take the patient under a variety of precautions and safeguards, to the radiation therapy department," he says.

In radiation therapy the surgeon and the anesthesiologist, who are in attendance throughout the procedure, are joined by Dr. David J. Bush, head of the department.

Special cones are attached to Ochsner's high-powered linear accelerator, one of the few of its type in the Gulf South. With this equipment, it is possible to confine the radiation treatment to a specific, pin-pointed area without damaging the surrounding tissue and structures.

"This technique has been found to be safe when properly organized with all life support systems always in place," Dr. Bolton says. "Tumors in many locations in the abdomen and chest cannot be removed. Currently, the doses of radiation that can be used are limited. By being able to focus radiation directly on the exposed tumor, we can deliver higher and more accurate doses of radiation without injuring the surrounding area," he adds.

The patient is again prepared and draped, and the incision is reopened. With the tumor exposed, we can focus radiation directly upon it and deliver an appropriate targeted dose of radiation," Dr. Bolton points out.

Martin Marietta to conduct propellant study

Martin Marietta's Michoud Division has received a $250,000 contract from NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center to study propellant scavenging from the Space Shuttle external tank.

The 12-month project will determine the amount of propellant available for scavenging in the external tank after a Shuttle flight. It will also examine different system concepts for retrieval of the remaining propellants while in orbit.

Propellants recovered from the external tank may be used in a number of ways.

Cryogenic fuels may be used to cool future space stations, power upper stage vehicles or assist in materials processing in space.

Liquid oxygen may be returned to its gaseous state for use by astronauts.

Systems to transfer scavenging propellants to storage tanks will also be studied during the year-long project.

Martin Marietta manufactures the giant external tanks at NASA's Michoud Assembly Facility in New Orleans, La.

Sea Grant Consortium gets $511,500 grant

A two-state agency headquartered in Ocean Springs has received a $511,500 federal grant to continue marine research, education and advisory service efforts in Mississippi and Alabama.

Dr. James I. Jones, director of the Mississippi-Alabama Sea Grant Consortium, announced recently that the grant will provide funds for more than 70 faculty and research support personnel involved in 19 marine-related projects at Mississippi and Alabama universities and research institutions.

"Building on Sea Grant's five-year assessment of Mississippi and Alabama estuarine eco-systems, our 1984 program is set to explore potential new resources and to solve problems surrounding the wise use of known resources in our area."

Through Sea Grant support scientists will be investigating the potential for a stone crab fishery, red drum survival at early life stages, production of protein from algae and the presence of industrial minerals on the continental shelf.

Specific problems are the focus of projects on alternative fuels for fishing vessels, organic pollutants in oysters, innovative chemical approaches to prevent fouling on marine surfaces, new techniques in seafood processing, the development of computer models to predict sediment movement and marine laws and regulations.

Support also continues for the Sea Grant Advisory Service, the program responsible for identifying specific needs and for providing marine and coastal resource users with information that results from Sea Grant research.

"The advisory service is particularly successful at matching problems with answers. The services of our advisory personnel are free of charge," Jones said.

In addition to the informal education efforts of the advisory service, the 1984 consortium program supports marine science training programs for teachers and a fellowship program for students involved in marine-related studies at the college level.

Consortium member institutions in Mississippi are Gulf Coast Research Laboratory, Jackson State University, Mississippi State University, University of Mississippi and University of Southern Mississippi.

Alabama members are Auburn University, University of Alabama at Birmingham and University of South Alabama.

The consortium is one of 19 Sea Grant colleges in the National Sea Grant College Program administered through the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, U.S. Department of Commerce.

Sea Grant is a unique partnership of federal and state governments, universities and industry working for sound economic development and appropriate use of our nation's marine and coastal resources, including the Great Lakes," Jones said.

"The nation's marine potential, although largely undeveloped, represents a major segment of our economy for the nation and for Mississippi and Alabama," he said.

The big Mardi Gras parade on tap this afternoon is across the bridge in Pass Christian,

The St. Paul Carnival Association's annual parade is scheduled to start at 2 p.m. and usually includes an exciting variety of floats.

On Monday, the day before Mardi Gras, the Krewe of Kids will parade in Cedar Point.

Activities for Tuesday include the Krewe of Real People in Bay St. Louis starting at 11 a.m.

The Bay parade forms at St. Rose de Lima's Catholic Church on Necaise Avenue.

The big Triton parade which is scheduled to start at 2 p.m. at Our Shopping Center in Waveland.

The parade will ramble down US-90 to the Bay Mall Shopping Center at Dunbar Avenue.

Parading in Hancock County will slow down a bit until the Annual St. Patrick's Day event on March 17.

We wish everyone a Happy Mardi Gras.

It was heart warming to see so many Hancock Countians attending the State of Mississippi official signing for the Louisiana World Exposition in New Orleans on Friday.

The comments made by many concerned whether the City of New Orleans would be ready for opening day.

Everywhere one looks, they see some type of construction underway.

The contingent from Hancock County enjoyed the coffee and Danish served on the Mississippi Queen prior to the official signing.

Good old New Orleans Jazz was provided by the Andrew Hall Society Jazz Band.

The Mississippi Pavilion appears to be in a terrific spot for the Exposition and should draw many visitors.

We will be looking forward to the opening of the fair on May 12, 1984.

Smokeless tobacco hazards enumerated

SMOKELESS TOBACCO

There are significant health hazards associated with the use of smokeless tobacco in the form of chewing tobacco and snuff, according to a report from the American Lung Association Smoking or Health Committee and the Mississippian Lung Association.

Young people are taking up the use of chewing tobacco and others are using smokeless tobacco as an alternative to smoking. Smokeless products are presented by manufacturers as a safe alternative to cigarette smoking, which they are not.

As with cigarette and pipe tobacco, smokeless tobacco products contain the addictive poison nicotine.

Nicotine is readily absorbed through the lining of the mouth and into the bloodstream which harms the cardiovascular system.

Tobacco and its by-products are extremely irritating to sensitive oral tissues and increase the risk of oral, pharyngeal (back of the throat), laryngeal (voice box) or esophageal cancers.

Dental problems are also caused by prolonged use. Additionally, the combination of smoking and use of smokeless products increases these risk factors.

Industry analysts feel that the number of tobacco and snuff users could double over the next decade.

U.S. Department of Agriculture statistics indicate that there were 134.5 million pounds of smokeless tobacco sold in the U.S. in 1982.

Doctor says teen's cancer death caused by snuff use

By The Associated Press

ADA, Okla.—A physician is starting a campaign against smokeless tobacco after the cancer death of a 19-year-old who used snuff.

Dr. Carl Hook says the cancer death of Sean Marsee of Ada is directly attributable to the former track star's six-year habit of dipping snuff, finely ground tobacco generally placed between gum and cheek.

A bill which has been passed by the Mississippi Senate and is now on its way to the House of Representatives will have a potentially detrimental effect on the sportsmen of Mississippi.

S.B. 2454, introduced by Senator Charles Ray Nix, would increase the number of commissioners in charge of the Department of Wildlife Conservation from five to nine, with the additional commissioners being appointed from each of the Supreme Court districts and one at large.

Such a change could be devastating for the game and fish resources of Mississippi and for the Department of Wildlife Conservation.

S.B. 2454 will not give Mississippi sportsmen more of a voice when it comes to matters of game and fish.

What it will do is make the already difficult task of making decisions about the future of our wildlife even more difficult.

The Mississippi Wildlife Federation feels strongly that since the reorganization of the Game and Fish Commission in 1978 by the Mississippi Legislature into the Department of Wildlife Conservation, our wildlife and fisheries resources have been fairly and scientifically managed for the best good of our game and for Mississippi sportsmen.

The addition of more commissioners could very easily allow the opportunity for special interest groups and political interference to influence the policies and regulations of the Department of Wildlife Conservation.

Wildlife and sportsmen will gain nothing and, in fact, will lose for years to come.

S.B. 2454 appears to be headed for the House Game and Fish Committee, chaired by Representative Emmett Owens.

Concerned Mississippi sportsmen should call their representatives immediately. Action will be taken in a very short time.

MEC

UNIT SYSTEM

The chairman of the Mississippi Economic Council said a House committee vote Tuesday rejecting the unit system for county road management is an indication that "some legislators still are unwilling to make difficult decisions necessary for improving the state."

The House County Affairs Committee defeated a county unit proposal 10-8 vote.

"It is discouraging that some of our legislators are willing to close their eyes to the wasteful and extravagant practices of county road management in Mississippi," said Sewell.

"Every highway study of the past 40 years has pointed to the need for change in our county road system." These studies have pointed to the losses of millions of tax dollars because of the inefficiencies of the road system, which county roads are managed.

Sewell added, "The disappointment is that in a time of financial crisis in the state these legislators are unwilling to face up to their responsibilities of legislative leadership."

Sewell pointed out that defeat of the county unit proposal came at a time when county supervisors are asking for 35 percent pay increases and supporting legislation permitting counties to provide private benefits in the form of grave digging and graveling of drives at public expense.

"The local taxpayers would be justified in calling for a taxpayer revolt. As a statewide organization of taxpayers," said Sewell, "the Council is appealing to the legislature to delay any increase in county road taxes until the monorail system is in place."

TAX ASSISTANCE

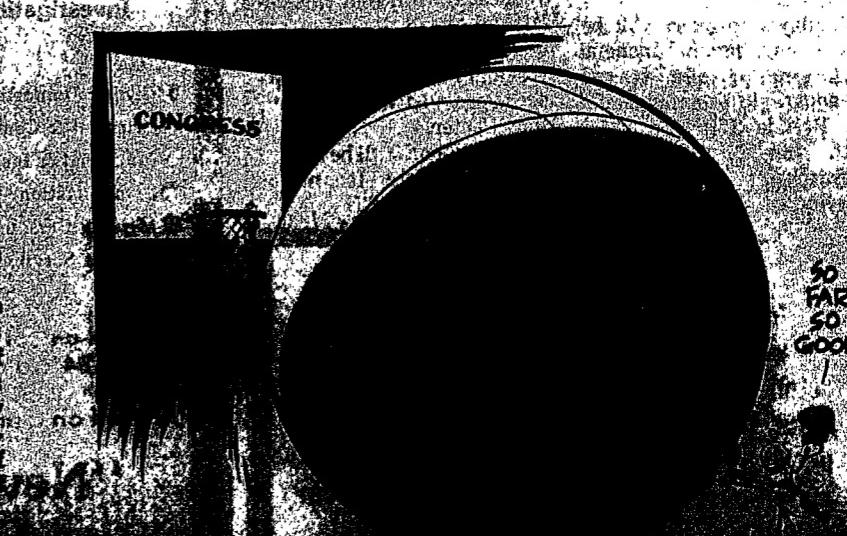

State Tax assistance is being offered to Mississippians across the state by the Governor's Service Line.

Provided in cooperation with the State Tax Commission, this service includes providing tax forms, answering basic state tax questions and referring callers to volunteer tax preparation services. Assistance may be obtained by dialing the toll-free number, 1-800-222-7622 or the Jackson number, 961-4042.

Last year, the Service Line served 764 Mississippians in the tax assistance program, according to Cheeky Herrington, director of the Program Information Division, Governor's Office of Federal-State Programs.

"Service Line counselors are able to answer many state tax questions," said Herrington, "but, for questions that cannot be answered immediately, Service Line personnel will consult with the Tax Commission and call the individual back."

"This assistance," he said, "is another step in our continuing efforts to make Service Line services as relevant as possible to the needs of Mississippians. We know that filing tax returns can be very confusing, and we want to eliminate this confusion."

GCCY offers childproof tips

Children are injured in their homes each day, and often ordinary household fixtures such as screened doors, electrical outlets, space heaters, stairways and steps are to blame.

To help keep children from becoming victims of these "household hazards," the Governor's Commission for Children and Youth (GCCY) has offered some "childproofing" tips to help make homes safer for children.

Commission Chairperson Dr. Peggy Emerson suggests parents or guardians check all doors and windows to see if latches and knobs work properly and doors open easily. If they do not, children may face a serious fire hazard. They could become trapped and burn to death if a fire occurs.

Having a pre-planned fire escape route is also recommended, and practicing once a week with children so they will know what to do if fire breaks out is a good idea.

Another childproofing suggestion is to cover all electrical outlets when not in use. Small children often are attracted to electrical outlets, and sometimes attempt to put fingers or other objects in them that might cause severe electrical shocks or burns.

Caution is recommended when using electrical appliances around children. Small children may pull extension cords or other electrical cords from the wall, resulting in injuries.

"Also, children require well lighted areas for play and other activities such as reading. Check areas such as playrooms, bedrooms and dens where children play to be sure there's adequate lighting. Poor lighting is bad for children's eyes," Emerson notes.

GCCY also recommended installing handrails on stairways and steps to help children avoid falls and injuries. "If there are more than three steps involved, a handrail should be provided to protect children and others from falls," Emerson says.

Another way to make a home safer for children is to make sure that space heaters are properly vented and there are no gas leaks in the house. Gas leaks are combustible and have a smothering effect on children and others. During the warm months ahead when heaters are not in use, GCCY suggests covering or securing heater knobs so children cannot turn them on. In some cases, knobs can't be removed.

The commission also suggests repairing or replacing worn screens on windows and doors. "Holes in screens are a temptation for children, and because they think they're fun to play in, children put fingers, hands, noses and feet through, often cutting themselves or collecting germs and bacteria found on the screen," Emerson says.

Individuals also should check for and repair broken windows, glass fixtures or chipped tiles. "These things can cause children to trip and fall or severely cut themselves," she says.

A final childproofing suggestion is to check for peeled paint, particularly in areas where food is prepared or served.

"Children can swallow pieces of peeled paint and get lead poisoning. Repaint the area using a lead-free paint, or cover it with wall paper or some sort of wall covering," Emerson suggests.

For more information on childproofing the home or other information about children and youth, phone the GCCY at 354-6772 or the toll-free service line, 1-800-222-7622.

1,225, Mason Chamberlain's proposal. Busbee and Campbell reported the figure to be somewhere between the two figures.

The payroll for the facility in 1983 was listed as $9.8 million, utilities $1.1 million and $3.4 for procurements.

Breakdowns were also made on management, middle management, salaried, clerical and manual labor, residence by county.

A list of newspapers used to advertise for positions was also included, but MCI reportedly rarely had to advertise for positions.

Busbee and Campbell both indicated they felt the new hiring procedures would benefit all persons in the area seeking employment.

Since the employment service would be handling the employment screening for MCI, Dick Thomas, Industrial Committee chairman of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce, said Saturday, "Persons having applications on file with Mason Chamberlain may want to update their files with the Mississippi Employment Service."

Mickey Ladner named Trooper of The Year

Highway Patrol Investigator Philip Michael (Mickey) Ladner, Bay St. Louis native and Long Beach resident, is Mississippi's Trooper of the Year.

The announcement was made at a recent North Jackson Exchange Club banquet. The Exchange Clubs of Mississippi sponsor the program in which Ladner was one of 11 Highway Patrol officers named at the district level to compete for the statewide award.

Ladner, 43, represented the Criminal Investigation Bureau in the contest and has been in the patrol since December 1966.

At the ceremony, Chief of Patrol George Saxon said, "If I had to draw a blueprint for a perfect officer, I'd have to take Mickey as my model."

"He never complains about the long hours and the hard work," Saxon said.

Representing the Gulfport District in the Exchange Club program was Tom Daniels, who has been public affairs officer in the six-county Gulfport District since 1979.

Ladner has served as a trooper in Columbus, Starkville and Gulfport, as well as being assigned to the Mississippi Crime Lab branch facility in Gulfport and executive security in Jackson.

He was promoted to investigator in March 1975.

Ladner is a graduate of St. Stanislaus High School and the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va.

He attended the Jeff Davis branch of Mississippi Gulf Coast Junior College and Mississippi State University.

He served in the Navy from 1958 until 1960 as a computer operator.

Ladner is married to the former

MICKEY LADNER

Sherry Anne Brown and has two daughters, Emily Anne and Sarah.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nolan S. Ladner of Bay St. Louis.

Hancock students excel at Olympics

Pearl River College's Hancock County Vo-Tech Center collected seven awards—three first place and four third place—at the annual District IV High School VICA Skills Olympics sponsored by the Pearl River College Vocational Technical Department and its local VICA Club.

Harrison County Vo-Tech Center was the big winner at the Olympics with three first place awards, five seconds and one third.

Gulfport High Vocational Center gathered five awards, the R. D. Brown Center in Biloxi collected four awards, and Mississippi Gulf Coast George County Center, Moss Point and Picayune all collected three.

Pearl River College's Lamar County Center won two awards and E. H. Keys Center at Ocean Springs netted one award.

Twelve high school and vocational centers from Hancock, Harrison, Forrest, Lamar, Pearl River and Jackson Counties participated in the day-long event.

First place winners in each contest will now compete in the overall state skills Olympics scheduled for Jackson in April.

The Hancock County winners included Marty J. Sahique, first place for Electrical Trades and third place for prepared speech, Leadership Development; Christopher Whitfield, third place, Auto Mechanics; Dean A. Kronauer, first place, Cabinet Making and Millwork; Donald Graham, first place, Carpentry; Shelton James and James Ladner, third place, Bricklaying; and Mark R. Breun, third place, Job Demonstration.

Musings

Coral, the skeleton of certain animals attached to rock, was highly prized. It was made into beads and charms. Job mentions it in discussing the value of wisdom.

"No mention shall be made of coral, or of pearls: for the price of wisdom is above rubies." —Job. 28:18

TREES

It's almost impossible to imagine a world without trees. Yet, most people take them for granted, never thinking of the hundreds of everyday benefits all living things receive from trees.

As an Arbor Day and Tree Planting Week reminder, a list of those benefits include that trees:

—Help supply oxygen we need to breathe. Yearly each acre of young trees can produce enough oxygen to keep 18 people alive;

—Help keep our air supply fresh by using up carbon dioxide emitted by humans and other animals, factories and engines;

—Use their hairy leaf surfaces to trap and filter out ash, dust, and pollen particles carried in the air;

—Dilute gaseous pollutants in the air as they release oxygen;

—Can be used to indicate air pollution levels of sulfur dioxide, just as canaries were once used to detect dangerous methane gas in coal mines;

—Provide food for humans;

—Lower air temperatures by enlisting the sun's energy to evaporate water in the leaves;

—Increase humidity in dry climates by releasing moisture as a by-product of food-making and evaporation;

—Give us a constant supply of products including lumber for buildings and tools, cellulose for paper and fiber; as well as nuts, mulches, oils, gums, syrups, and uncounted additional products;

—Cut noise pollution by acting as barriers to sound. Each 100-foot width of trees can absorb about six to eight decibels of sound intensity. As much as 72 decibels are generated along busy highways, and the reduction of noise by tree barriers could be quite significant to residents;

—Camouflage harsh scenery and unsightly city dumps, auto graveyards and mine sites;

—Provide shade and beauty, thus promoting a sense of serenity in a hurried world.

—Leaves break the onslaught of pelting raindrops on soil surfaces and give the soil a chance to soak up more water;

—When fallen, cover the ground to keep the soil from drying out;

—By decaying, replace minerals in the soil and enrich it to support later plant growth.

NSTL Mardi Gras Krewe stages annual ball

The National Space Technology Laboratories (NSTL) Mardi Gras Krewe annual ball was held on Saturday evening, Feb. 18, at the Jourdan River Shores Country Club in Kiln.

The NSTL krewe is the youngest Mardi Gras krewe organized on the Mississippi Gulf Coast. The krewe was established in 1982 with the primary purpose of introducing the Gulf Coast communities to the activities of NASA, the Navy, and other resident agencies at NSTL and highlighting the contributions they are making toward pioneering our country's future.

The theme of this year's NSTL Mardi Gras Krewe ball, "America's Future Launched From the Mississippi Coast," emphasizes the research and development contribution that NSTL agencies are making toward the exploration of space, the uncovering of the mysteries of the ocean, and the development of the earth's resources.

His Majesty, King of the NSTL Krewe is Robert G. Allen, director, Engineering Sciences Center, Computer Sciences Corporation. The king wore attire from the 13th Century period. The gold brocade tunic was decorated in floral and geometric pattern. The neckline was trimmed in rhinestones and the gold brocade cape was trimmed in gold and highlighted with gold sequins. The crown was of the traditional type of gold embellished with rhinestones as was the matching scepter.

Her Majesty, Queen of the NSTL Krewe, Rita Pierce, wore a 13th Century gown of gold brocade patterned in floral and geometric designs with a diamond shaped neckline trimmed in gold sequins. The full A-line skirt which had an 8-foot waist mantle was also of gold brocade trimmed in gold sequins. Her crystalline collar was encrusted with gold sequins. The crown and scepter were matching with those of the king. An ornate rhinestone necklace and earrings completed the ensemble.

The captain wore a costume of 12th Century Roman design of black velvet trimmed with silver sequins and rhinestones. The traditional captain's headdress was silver with black plumes. This year's costume designer for the krewe was Marthy Oriuna of New Orleans, La.

The NSTL Mardi Gras ball festivities were initiated by the master of ceremonies, Stewart B. Nelson, special assistant to the commanding officer of the Naval Oceanographic office. After the guests were provided with the background of the krewe and the significance of this year's theme, "America's Future Launched From the Mississippi Coast," the NSTL Mardi Gras Seal was positioned behind the throne in full view. Mr. Nelson introduced the officers of the krewe as follows:

Cmdr. Hal Lambright (USN retired) president, was escorted by Patricia M. Harvill, president of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce; Vice President Pat B. Garcia was escorted by Edward R. Ling, NASA's chief counsel at NSTL.

Margaret Thompson, secretary, was escorted by A.B. (Bob) Gorham, NSTL project director, Pan Am World Services.

Stewart Nelson, standing in for his brother Bruce, krewe treasurer, was escorted by Edith Bierhorst Back, Bay St. Louis bureau chief for the Sun/Daily Herald.

Katharine R. Wallace, historian, was escorted by Capt. Robert Palmer, USCG, deputy director of the NOAA Data Buoy Center.

The krewe king, queen, and captain began the grand march and an evening of festivities and revelry commenced.

Triton waxes nostalgic at tenth anniversary Bal Masque

The Krewe of Triton held its spectacular 10th annual bal masque on Saturday night at the Waveland American Legion Hall.

The theme for its 10th year anniversary was "Recollections."

The guests of Triton entered and prepared for a night of frivolity. The house lights were lowered and the captain's whistle began the festivities.

In tribute to the monarchs of the past eight years were presented to the assembly of guests, followed by the reappearance of the 1983 court of "Ports of Paradise."

Attired in their golden garb King Triton the IX and Queen Amphitrite I appeared to welcome all in attendance.

To begin the 10th year tableau the Royal Crest of the Krewe of Triton was spotlighted.

In honor of the anniversary the Royal Crest was redesigned to depict the white-bearded King Triton, grasping a trident, rising from a blue and angry sea, and blowing his Triton shell to calm the waters.

As the officers of Triton saluted their guests they were attired in radiant red satin tunics trimmed in gold and silver sequins.

The capes were embellished with a 24 karat gold lame' crown with a silver sequined scepter in the background.

"Recollections" began as Triton remembered its first year, 1975 with its "Party Time."

The "Party Time" costume featured a champagne glass with tiny bubbles surrounding it.

The captain of Triton made his grand entrance from a magnificently adorned birthday cake on which the captain's headdress featuring the anniversary doublet and a dozen white plumes formed the cake's top ornamentation.

The captain's attire was of white velvet and 24 karat silver lame'.

His commanding cape featured the new royal crest on the back, made from a multitude of rows of brilliant sparkling sequins and brilliant rhinestones.

In 1976 the theme of Triton discovery to expand man's knowledge of the universe. The Krewe's costumes depicted the early Spanish explorers.

For the fourth year Triton presented the ghoulish creatures associated with a Haunted House.

The krewe crept out onto the floor in black floor-length tunics with a creepy spider on the front.

The Famous Lovers of Triton's fifth year frolicked out with hearts and flowers in abundance and throwing hugs and kisses to the crowd.

In 1980 Triton's krewe pushed across the prairies on "Trails West."

The krewe depicted cowboys and Indians who "hooped and hollered" in typical fashion.

Adventure on the High Seas was the theme for the seventh year. The sea captains commanded the floor for their arrival, cruising around the floor conducting shipboard tasks.

In 1982, Adventure Classics was the theme for the Mardi Gras season. The writers of these classics were depicted by the krewe with ink wells and quill pens.

The dukes of Triton carried out the themes of its Party Time, Legend and Folklore, Great Explorers, Haunted House, Famous Lovers, and Trails West. They were presented to an enthralled group of spectators.

Following the presentation of Triton's dukes the spotlights dimmed and thousands of tiny lights danced across the walls in preparation for King Triton X's entrance.

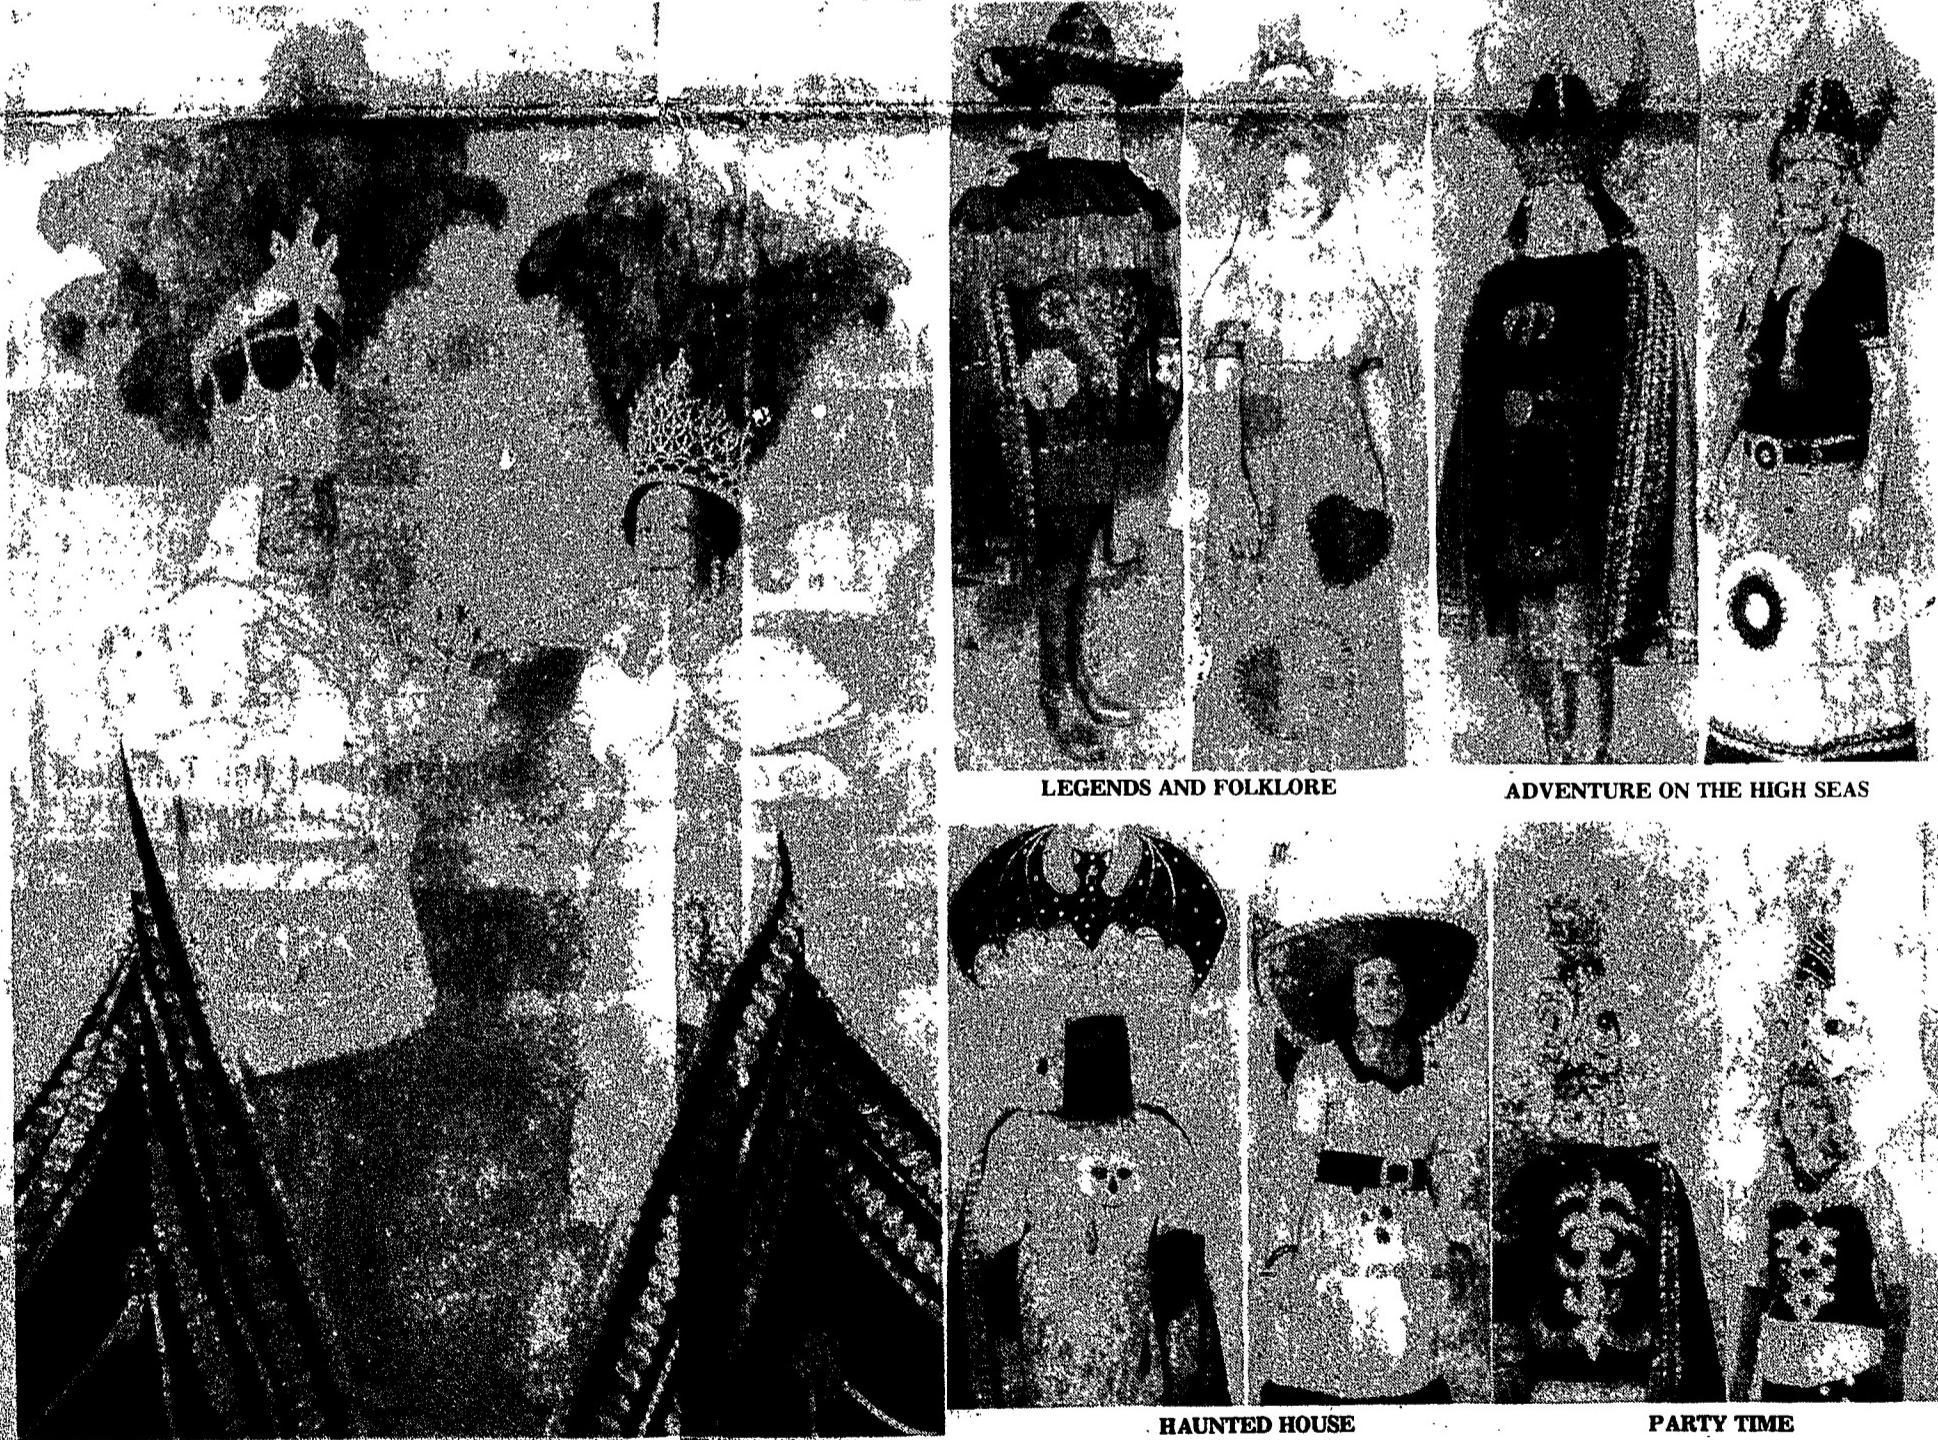

The curtains parted to reveal King Triton X. The captain of Triton escorted the king around the floor and upon his return to his throne the royal maids of Triton were presented.

Directed the theme of its Party Time was Mrs. Tim Bourgeois.

Mrs. Phil Williams represented Legend and Folklore.

The Great Explorers were depicted by Mrs. Reginald Edward Jr.

Friendship Oak DAR members attend 78th State Conference

By Joe Pilet
Vice Regent
Friendship Oak
Chapter NS DAR

Committee members presenting the Friendship Oak Chapter National Society Daughters of the American Revolution met Monday in the home of Mrs. Nunez C. Pilet in Bay St. Louis to plan programs and establish dates for group meetings during the 1983-84 term. The nominating committee, also meeting at that time prepared a slate of officers to be voted upon at the membership meeting to be held March 5 in the ground floor home of Mrs. E. Cassis.

During the morning session the meeting group was treated to highlights of the State Conference of the Mississippi Society held in Jackson Feb. 21-23. It was decided that Friendship chapter was awarded the Honor Roll for completing national requirements received two Certificates of Merit given for Outstanding Program and American Stage.

The Mississippi Society now has 34 chapters with total membership of 5,769 charterers. All but five chapters of the society were represented at the conference, it was reported. In the morning session Mrs. J. Thomas passed out copies of the State Resolutions. The resolution submitted by the Mississippi Delta Chapter deserved many favorable comments. The resolution was in response to a report "insist on mediocrity in public education" and called upon members to demand that teachers be required to pass annual competency testing to be accomplished in subjects matter they teach, and to encourage strong disciplinary standards. It also required institution of teaching of moral absolutes, patriotism and character building concepts.

Mrs. Pilet provided each of those present with a copy of the DAR Manual for Citizenship and urged members to become involved in helping those who wish to become American citizens. It was reported that several copies of this informative booklet had been placed in the public libraries along the Coast.

A planning session followed the luncheon where programs for the 1985-year regular meetings were decided upon. Guidelines for meeting national requirements were followed to include conservation, education, history, patriotism and national defense.

"Our Friendship Oak Chapter was well represented at the conference," remarked Mrs. John C. Elkins, organizing regent. She spoke highly of the report given by Mrs. George Cassis, state chairman of the National Committee DAR Museum and announced that Mrs. Cassis would present a museum program during a regular meeting of the group in 1985. In addition to Mrs. Elkins and Mrs. Cassis, the State Conference was attended by Mrs. Pilet, vice regent and delegates Mimes. W. J. Gammel, J. R. Thomas, and alternates, Mrs. P. R. Davenport.

BAY NIGHT SPOT RE-OPENS—Classic dancer Hanzel Baxter of Bay St. Louis is one of several performers now at the recently re-opened De-Ahna's Night Gallery on South Beach Boulevard in Bay St. Louis. DeAhna recently returned from a performing tour to re-open her club. She says a variety of 'Las Vegas review style' performers will be on stage at the night spot beginning at 8 p.m. nightly except on Sunday. Baxter performs a variety of modern dance and jazz routines mixed with acrobatics to classic tunes. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducom Jr.)

MINI-DACHSHUND—A good home with a fenced yard is needed soon for this miniature brown dachshund named Stretch who is now at the Hancock County Animal Shelter on Gulfside Drive in Waveland. The little one-year-old male dog is grieving and won't eat because he's starving for some love and attention. The dachshund was thoughtlessly dumped on the roadside near the shelter. To adopt Stretch or any other of the fine animals at the shelter please telephone the Bay-Waveland Humane Society volunteer at 467-0230 Monday, Wednesday or Friday from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.; Tuesday from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m.; Thursday from noon until 3 p.m.; or Saturday from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducom Jr.)

TRAINED DOG—He speaks, sits, lays down and shakes hands on command and is available for adoption to a good home with a fenced yard at the Hancock County Animal Shelter on Gulfside Drive in Waveland. This amazing large chocolate brown male dog named Night Train is about two years old and seems to be very gentle. He was thoughtlessly dumped on the roadside along with little Stretch near the shelter. He is not a Night Train or any of the other nice animals at the shelter. Please telephone the Bay-Waveland Humane Society volunteer at 467-0230 Monday, Wednesday or Friday from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.; Tuesday from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m.; Thursday from noon until 3 p.m.; or Saturday from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. (Staff photo by Wayne Ducom Jr.)
